Administrative Record and Information Repositories for Eielson Air Force Base Environmental Cleanup

Eielson Air Force Base (AFB) is a Superfund site conducting environmental cleanup work. To help keep the public informed of the process, information concerning cleanup is available in an Administrative Record and Information Repositories.

What is an Administrative Record?

An Administrative Record is a collection of documents considered or relied upon to select cleanup alternatives for each site. It contains volumes of comprehensive technical data and other information. It serves two purposes: to ensure an opportunity for public involvement in the selection of site cleanup methods and to provide a basis for judicial review of the selection of those methods.

What is an Information Repository?

An Information Repository is a set of public documents related to environmental cleanup. They include fact sheets, newsletter articles, reports, plans, and other related documents. While an Administrative Record contains all documents that form the basis for selecting a cleanup method, the Information Repository also contains cleanup information and other items of interest to the public. The Information Repository is updated as cleanup methods are selected for each area and may include copies of documents from the Administrative Record.
